My objective and main goal in the mobile development degree, is to graduate, be able to walk with my other classmates, and receive my diploma, even with the trials of a non-traditional student as old as I am. This I am trying to accomplish this while working with a full time work schedule, as well as family life, including a girlfriend and four young children. To be able to get this done; however, I am diligently attempting to challenge my resolve to schedule tasks and assignments as we learned in the last class, to keep up with everything that needs to be taken care of, as well as make sure I have some play time and do not get burned out. While making the whole school, work, life balance a new adventure, and striving to be more punctual in my assignments through more self-control about my game playing habit, will be a struggle, but I am willing to the commit to the end goal of a mobile development bachelor's degree with a nice high GPA, that employers will look at and see through diligence and drive, that I am eager to join the workforce in this new career path.
